

Spectrum Labs Wins $4 Million Patent Infringement Judgment Against Dr. Greens

On March 22, 2019, a San Diego Federal Court thumped Dr. Greens by tripling a patent infringement jury verdict and awarding Spectrum Labs over $3 million in damages, interest, and attorneys' fees. The judgment will most likely top $4,000,000 once the court has determined final attorney fees awarded to Spectrum. In a scorching opinion, the federal judge chastised Dr. Greens and its owner, Matt Green, for not testing the Agent X product when they first received Spectrum Labs' infringement warning and then attempting to hide their infringement.

The case involved Spectrum's patent to its Quick Fix synthetic urine product: U.S. Patent No. 7,192,776. Dr. Greens, which sells Agent X and other competing synthetic products, responded to Spectrum's notice by suing Spectrum in federal court in California in hopes of establishing that Agent X product did not infringe Spectrum's patent. While Dr. Greens contended that its products did not contain any of the patented antibacterials called "biocides," testing by an independent laboratory found one of the patented biocides in an Agent X sample.

After a two-week jury trial in San Diego that ended in February 2018, the jury found Agent X infringed the Spectrum patent and returned an $865,173 verdict against Dr. Greens and Dr. Greens' owner, Matt Green, personally. Because the jury also found that Dr. Greens willfully infringed, Spectrum asked the judge to multiply the damages and award Spectrum its attorneys' fees. The judge granted Spectrum's motion in its entirety. The court ruled that Dr. Greens' intentional infringement, vexatious litigation conduct, and attempts to conceal the prior infringing formula all weighed in favor of the rare sanction of tripling the damages and awarding Spectrum its legal fees.

With this case now behind it, Spectrum Labs is currently moving forward with seeking financial restitution against Michael Tandberg and "Synthetix5" and "Done Deal" by Green Planet for alleged infringement of the Spectrum Labs' patent.

Spectrum will continue to aggressively evaluate claims against other synthetic urine manufacturers that potentially violate Spectrum's patent to Quick Fix synthetic urine. As the Dr. Greens' case demonstrates, courts will hold infringing companies and individuals accountable for the harm caused by their infringement.

The manufacturers and distributors share a financial liability in all infringing product. If the manufacturer goes out of business or refuses to pay a court judgement, Spectrum can and will seek financial relief from all downstream vendors selling the infringing products. Therefore, please protect your company's interest and get a written indemnification from your current synthetic distributor.
